Personal Statement

I've been in and around the theatre, film and television industries for about fifteen years, and even though I came back to directing relatively recently, I've been working up to it for a very long time.

On the way, I've developed new writing for the stage (including commissioning and directing Lisa McGee's early work), produced the Irish premiere of The 24hr Plays, taught acting at University of Ulster, lectured in theatre at Queen's University Belfast, and was Artistic Director of my home-town's Lyric Theatre Drama Studio – an actor training program for performers aged 18-26. Add to that my experiences over ten years living and working as an actor in London, in everything from BBC period dramas to Ridley Scott produced Sci-Fi, from the National Theatre to the the Bond stage, and you'll see why I feel like I have something different to offer. Unlike most directors, who rarely get to see how their heroes do the same job, I've been lucky enough to be directed by some of the best, both on screen and on stage – including Lynsey Miller, Stephen Frears, Lewis Arnold, Nick Murphy, Ralph Fiennes, Rian Johnson, Oliver Hirschbiegel, Howard Davies, David Farr, and Dominic Cooke.

Most recently, I returned to directing for the stage, in a critically acclaimed production of Joseph Crilly's On McQuillan's Hill at the Finborough Theatre, London.

Press Response to On McQuillan's Hill

“directed with a sensitive ear for snatching comedy from the jaws of conflict by Jonathan Harden” * The Stage

“A production that’s enhanced by an exceptionally strong cast. Under Jonathan Harden’s direction, they deliver a real gem.”  Morning Star

“Harden... knows instinctively when to let the play breathe, and when to push it on”  London Theatre 1

“Jonathan Harden and an exemplary cast explore even greater depths to the always three dimensional roles. Behind the near mythical ambience there lie utterly credible characters. These are never less than real people with genuine lives and backgrounds” * The Spy in the Stalls

“Jonathan Harden’s direction gets the pacing just right and manages to unfold this complex and twisting story in a way that makes it both comprehensible and completely gripping”  London Living Live

“Harden’s direction leans into the bleakness... infusing the play something of a melancholic anger” - * A Younger Theatre

“the emotional truth of the performances that [Harden] encourages starts to burn through, and by the second half of the evening, we feel the full heat of each revelation” - The Arts Desk
